Access Control

Access Control

Access control is now an essential component in protecting your facility, maintaining business continuity and ensuring customer safety. An access control system empowers you to swiftly and easily:

Add, modify or delete user access

Download audit trails

Generate system reports via management software for comprehensive site security reviews. Whether you require a fully networked solution or stand alone control for one door, implementing an access control system to your facility will help your organisation maintain security, integrity and control user access in several ways with many associated benefits.

Secure company assets

Limit critical area access to people with a designated need. Program common areas for unlimited access. Update effortlessly as circumstances change.

Manage Security from One location

Link multiple facility systems to a central server so that you can monitor access points and manage user databases from one location. You can even manage your Access Control system through a web portal. Read more about Salto Access Control here.

Cost effective ownership

Technology improvements like smartcard swipe cards, battery powered locksets, wireless networks and even electronic cylinders are just a few of the features that now make access control systems easier and more affordable to install, run, modify and expand.

Reduce the dependency on keys and locks that may constantly need to be changed or replaced when users arrive, gain new access rights or leave.

Easy to use software, reduced cabling and inexpensive programming can all dramatically lower the cost of managing your facility and keeping it secure. With an access control system, you have the power, flexibility and control.

Expanding Functionality

Access control now does much more than just determining who goes where. Today's technology also lets you incorporate Time In Attendance, Loyalty Rewards, Vending and many other applications that you may not have thought possible.
